

Dear FCC,

I am horrified to learn that telephone and cable companies might be granted what is tantamount to a monopoly over internet access. The market, not the government, nor big business should decide who can and who can't offer these services.

I chose my ISP seven years ago as, amongst other things, it uses its profits to offer free internet service to those who normally could not afford it. Do you think Verizon, SBC, Qwest, etc. would do the same? Not likely!

Disgusted,
Simon Epstein
